

The San Rocco Lyrical Choir

The San Rocco Operatic Choir was founded in 1989 by members of the operatic and cultural circles in Bologna. Directed by Marialuce Monari, the choir has appeared in opera houses in Italy and at international festivals in Paris, Prague, Vienna, Munich and Bonn among other places.

Musical Director	Marialuce Monari
Piano	Francesca Fierro
Soprano	Alessandra Vicinelli

The Deutsche Welle Choir

The multicultural ensemble has been performing an international repertoire of songs across the world for 20 years. The singers consider themselves as ambassadors for peace who want to build bridges to link people and cultures. It was founded by members of the German international broadcasting service.

Like migratory birds, music overcomes boundaries and unites people. On World Migratory Bird Day both choirs make their first joint performance to raise their voices for the protection of migratory birds worldwide.

Musical Director	Maja Braun
Piano	Hubertus Jütten

... will be used to protect the White-winged Flufftail. Being threatened with extinction, the White-winged Flufftail is listed on the IUCN Red List of endangered species. Less than 250 birds remain worldwide, which are restricted to Ethiopia and South Africa. A joint action plan of AEWA and the Bonn Convention aims to reduce habitat loss as well as human disturbance, and prevent further losses to the remaining delicate population. Our objective is to identify new breeding sites and preserve habitats to ensure the survival of the White-winged Flufftail.

The Bonn Convention (CMS)

As an environmental treaty under the auspices of the United Nations Environment Programme, the Bonn Convention provides a global platform for the conservation and sustainable use of migratory species and their habitats. The Convention brings together the countries through which migrating animals pass and lays down the legal basis for conservation measures for the species' entire migration route.

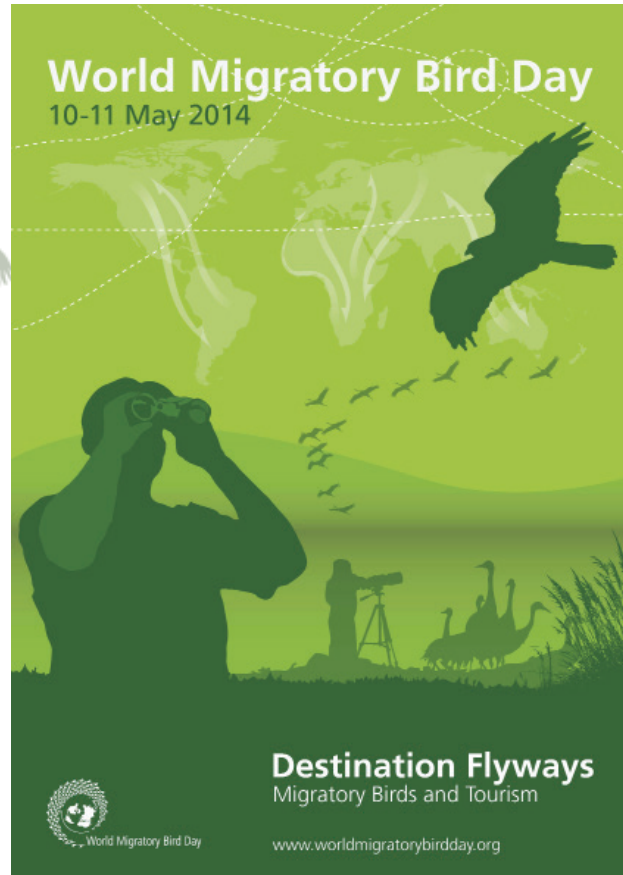

AEWA

The Agreement on the Conservation of African-Eurasian Migratory Waterbirds (AEWA) is an international treaty for the protection of migratory waterbirds and their habitats in Africa, Europe, parts of Asia and Greenland as well as the Canadian Archipelago. AEWA came into being under the auspices of the Bonn Convention and is administered by the United Nations Environment Programme (UNEP).

Within the framework of the Agreement, governments and conservationists from numerous countries decide on the protective steps to be taken for waterbirds throughout their entire migration range.

World Migratory Bird Day

Every year the Bonn Convention and AEWA organize World Migratory Bird Day (WMBD). This is a global campaign aiming to protect migratory birds and their habitats. To this end on the second weekend in May, events take place across the world. This year the operatic choir Corale Lirica San Rocco from Bologna and Deutsche Welle Choir will give a benefit concert on behalf of the White-winged Flufftail.

With the theme "Destination Flyways: Migratory Birds and Tourism", WMBD 2014 will highlight the links between migratory bird conservation, local community development and wildlife watching tourism around the world.

Every year, more than one billion tourists cross international borders. A thriving wildlife is a key tourism asset, and the spectacular movements of the world's migratory birds are no exception. Properly managed, popular bird-related tourism activities such as bird watching or bird photography can serve as the foundation for a mutually beneficial relationship between people and migratory birds.

For the 2014 Campaign, WMBD is partnering with the World Tourism Organization (UNWTO) to highlight the Destination Flyways project. Led by UNWTO and implemented together with several partners with sound experience in the field of conservation and tourism, Destination Flyways will develop sustainable tourism in locations along the world's major migratory bird routes, also known as flyways.

By channelling tourism revenue back into conservation of the sites, the project aims to safeguard the birds' habitats, while creating resilient and green job opportunities for local communities.
